

THE STEEL MARKET.

Finished Products Stored in Anticipation of Later Demand.

But slight changes have been noted in the market by steel interests. There has been a letup in buying. Some equipment orders were placed, but it is admitted that they are materially smaller than normal requirements for the roads placing orders. Prices for future delivery are holding steady, with shading on buying for immediate delivery.

Much of the steel manufactured at present is going into warehouses in anticipation of a market for it later on. Railroad orders are scarce, and the demand is confined in the main to wire, sheets and tin plate.
